According to one current survey, two out of three customers use at least three channels, on average, to connect with customer service. That’s one of the more conservative estimates of how customers are inclined to switch channels when contacting a company for support. The critical point here is that customers will use the most convenient communication method available to them at any given moment.

Organizations must respond coherently to channel-hopping customers by unifying data across all of their customer support touch points so that the information gathered in one channel is seamlessly available in others.

Many of our readers’ organizations struggle to unify data across channels. Make sure to educate them in this Best Practices installment, helping them achieve a clear, consistent omnichannel support strategy.
